	Much as has been said about the Blue Laws, every genuine Yankee knows that their influence was as nothing compared with that of Thomas' Almanack. There are to this day thousands of honest hard-drinking Yankee farmers who will confess that they never kissed their wives until they had consulted Thomas' Almanack.

Various numbers between 1812 and 1856, inclusive. 35
- These were mostly published in New York, some in Newark, and some in Rahway, and bear a greater variety of imprints than names. "Hutchins Improved," for 1812-14, and 1818, purport to be by "John Nathan Hutchins, Philom." After 1818 this name does not appear. The name, whatever it was originally, seems to have been made very popular, and the publishers who, as a class, had not then attained their present high standard of integrity, evidently had no respect for trade marks.
